

Making the Most of References/Bibliographies

Coming across the perfect article can make your day! When finding that article, you should ask yourself, "What did this author read? What materials did this author use in his/her research?" The list of References (AKA "Bibliography" or "Works Cited") can prove to be a treasure trove of information. So by all means, use it! ☺

Below are selected bibliographic references from an article retrieved from the Expanded Academic ASAP database.

Translating learning style theory into developmental education practice: an article based on Gregorc's cognitive learning styles. Marion Terry.
Journal of College Reading and Learning* 32.2 (Spring 2002): p154(23).
